BULLOCH TIMES

AND
THE STATESBORO NEWSD. B. TURNER, Editor and Owner
SUBSCRIPTION $1.50 PER YEAR

Entered as second-class matter March 18, 1896, at the postoffice at Statesboro, Ga., under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Have We Slipped?

BECAUSE IT IS EASY to dwell in the past, we are thinking of the Christmas that used to be. We want to know how we have changed—whether we have gone ahead or slipped backward—and so we began the process of checking up.

At the sheriff's office the morning after, we asked Sheriff Mallard about the activities around his place during the holidays, and he smiled as he told us he had only one call—and that was hardly a Christmas episode. Since it was news we were after, we insisted on learning the full truth, and he told us that some wife had called up there to have the sheriff make investigation of her husband, whom she suspected of having squandered his time and substance with some other woman. The sheriff didn't give us names, and we haven't even tried to guess, for we know the incident about which the wife protested had come to be more or less commonplace in recent years.

But as we walked out of his office, we wondered whether we have gone forward or backward—or stood still—within the realm of a fifty-year era. Fifty years ago the day following Christmas we would have been told that there was a cutting scrape in the Lockhart district; faces would have been mashed in the Bay district; in the Landon district there would have been reverberations from a grand-pulling at the Steve Hendrix store; on the court house square in Statesboro there would have been rough-and-tumble fighting; men and boys would have been engaged in fireworks battles on the streets and some of them would have come out blinded for life. All these were natural incidents of a Christmas fifty years ago.

But today it is different—only one semblance of disorder—a married fellow had run around with another woman and his wife was peeved over the occurrence and wanted the sheriff to do something.

Have we gone forward or backward—or merely stood still? Customs have changed, to be sure, but human nature seems to be about where we left it a half century ago.

Age An Obstruction

SORT OF STRANGE the extreme to which youth goes in its demands that age get out of the way and permit swifter action; sort of strange the extreme to which it goes to place blame upon age for the incidents and accidents of life for which youth alone is responsible.

Up in a certain community of the state of North Carolina there are four young men in one group who are still boiling over in their wrath at an incident for which they alone were responsible but which they sought charge to the misconduct of a couple of men who are loosely classed as old fossils.

The two elderly men were headed toward Athens, and at a speed around the prescribed 35 miles per hour, with occasional slowing down for side roads and cross roads. The four youngsters had worked in a Jacksonville, Fla., plant until 2:30 o'clock on the same morning and thereupon headed back toward their home in North Carolina. At a short while before 9 o'clock which was approximately six hours after their quitting the Florida city 250 miles from their starting point—they came upon the slow trail of the two old men at a point some five miles beyond Louisville. The old men were keeping their regular stride; the young men were traveling at their regular stride. Suddenly the youngsters shot past the old men, snatched their car short back upon the pavement, it swerved around, turned over on its side, rolled up a hill, and then slipped back down upon the highway facing back in the direction from which it had come. All breakable glass had been shattered; not one of the young men was hurt; but all were mighty angry. And at whom, do you think? At the old men who had retarded their straight-ahead speed. The old men had made no contribution to the calamity except that they were riding on the highway when the young men came up at break-neck speed. The youth driving had lost control of his car when he sped around, and it was all his fault. But can you guess what they did? Yes, they called for the highway patrol and held the old men for three solid hours while the patrolmen were coming because it is a violation of the law to leave the scene of an accident.

When the patrolmen came they were young men of wisdom. They told the boys who were mad that the indications were they had lost control of their car, which was in violation of the law, and they were subject to charges, even if they desired to press charges against those old men who had been riding ahead of them, coasting which would call for a court hearing at some time which would later be fixed by the court officials.

You've guessed it: The boys were not convinced, but they were subdued; rather than stand trial, they were anxious to forget the matter and repair their own damaged car. And thus it ended.

But the old men, headed toward an engagement a hundred miles further, had been hindered past time for meeting their engagement. Thus it was that old age and innocence must suffer for the impetuous speed and recklessness of youth.

Weighing An Eyelash

THAT SCIENTIFIC spirit in another column which reveals the mechanical development by which the actual weight of an eyelash may be registered, certainly fascinates.

It is not fully made clear how the weighing of the hair contributes to the sum total of human happiness or profit, but it is easy to recognize that we are going counter and doing things when we are able to place a hair on the scales and learn that it weighs one-three-millionths on an ounce. We are unable to comprehend a thing so small of this size, and we have been mashed in the Bay district; in the Landon district there would have been reverberations from a grand-pulling at the Steve Hendrix store; on the court house square in Statesboro there would have been rough-and-tumble fighting; men and boys would have been engaged in fireworks battles on the streets and some of them would have come out blinded for life. All these were natural incidents of a Christmas fifty years ago.

If nothing more valuable is being proved, we are at least learning the importance of small matters. We read once of a mechanical device so delicate that it would register the least of a tallow candle as far away as the moon. To be sure the ordinary candle is no longer important except as a standard of measurement. Rarely do we see one of these instruments of light, and we had begun to imagine they had lost their importance until we read that statement about the heat registry extending so far away as the moon.

This has come to be a big world, but with its big, small things have not lost their magnitude to any appreciable extent.

PARACHUTING, A LA BUGGY UMBRELLA

I believe I was the first parachutist in my home state. It was "way back yonder" when my attempted parachute jump took place. My parachute was our big buggy umbrella. The jump was made from the top of our old 2-story log barn. Being only about ten years old, I called for help to get me out of the barn. My parachute to me was not my parachute to the top of the building.

My two co-parachutists were Ed and John, little negroes of about my age. We had to work quietly—we had slipped the umbrella out of the buggy shed, and as it was considered a valuable asset to travel, we wanted to be careful and not damage it. We were not embarrassed with excess cloth on each being dressed in only a shirt, a very common mode of attire back then.

I recall that the weather was a little bit breezy that August afternoon. We were almost ready for the jump. Ed and John were helping me to get the umbrella open. The ribs were strong and it took manpower to adjust them. Each of us had hold of the handle. As soon as the umbrella was opened, I was to whistle so the boys would turn everything loose and give me a shove outward-like.

About ten seconds before I was ready to leap, a gust of wind got under our chute and while Ed and I were clinging on to the handle, we glided slightly over the roof, and started down. Ed didn't have time to turn loose. The handle pulled out and we hit the ground amidst a bunch of Jimson weeds, and the umbrella handle popped me on the side of the head and laid me low. John had rolled off the roof and had landed in the horse trough. When I came to, John and Ed were nowhere in sight. I tried to slip the umbrella back to the shed "just so," but I saw me. I had to eat my food standing up for over a week.

A VITAMIN PILLS SCARCE

while Mr. and Mrs. Moore's little four-year-old son climbed up on the mantel board and got Mr. Moore's bottle of a, b, c, d, e, f, g, and h vitamins. He had gained 4 pounds, and was fat as a pig. He was evidently thought they were gum drops. The kid's parents didn't worry so much about the 48¢ that he paid for the vitamin pills but were bothered about what they would do to the eater.

The mores thought of calling for Dr. Hubbard green, but decided to wait a few minutes. In less than an hour, Billy Moore had gained 4 pounds, and was fat as a pig. He was evidently thought they were gum drops. The kid's parents didn't worry so much about the 48¢ that he paid for the vitamin pills but were bothered about what they would do to the eater.

in 4 hours Billy had gained 12 more lbs., and his ma had to change his clothes for teeny Moore's clothes, he being 3 years older than Billy, and they fitted him o.k. pa more knew that by morning Billy would be wearing one of his suits. Billy didn't seem to be bothered much, and kept on wishing that he could get hold of another bottle of candy.

by midnight that night Billy showed no bad effects and the folks all went to bed and by morning Billy had fell off to his natural size and they put his own clothes back on. Billy's folks thought that he would be a giant in spite of everything and everybody. Dr. green told them that vitamin pills would hurt or help anybody, and he said he guessed that most of them are made to sell and are not intended to be a health aid.

How women and girls may get wanted relief from functional periodic pain

Cardui is a liquid medicine which many women say has brought relief from the cramp-like agony and nervous strain of functional periodic distress. Here's how it may help:

1. Taken like a tonic, it should stimulate appetite, aid digestion, and thus help build up the system.
2. Started 3 days before "your time," it should help relieve pain, due to purely functional periodic causes.

Try Cardui. If it helps, you'll be glad you did.

How Much Is a Billion Gallons of 100-Octane Gasoline?

It's enough to fill 120,000 tank cars—a train 1,000 miles long.

It's enough to fill an 8-inch pipe line that would circle the earth three times at the equator.

It's enough to fuel 400,000 flying Fortresses for a round trip flight from Britain to Germany.

That's a billion gallons of 100-octane gasoline! But it's more than that. It's the effort of the 14,000 men and women of Humble Oil & Refining Company, who are today celebrating the production of the one-billionth gallon of 100-octane aviation gasoline at Baytown refinery—a remarkable feat in the history of the petroleum industry.

It is one of the wartime contributions of the 14,000 men and women of Humble—scientists, drillers, roustabouts, stenographers, pipeliners, technologists, truck drivers, geologists, glassblowers, stillmen and those working in hundreds of other occupations.

- Here is a partial list of their accomplishments to date:
- FIRST to produce at one refinery a billion gallons of finished 100-octane aviation gasoline. The Baytown refinery has produced more 100-octane aviation gasoline than any other plant in the world.
 - FIRST to produce synthetic toluene. The Baytown Ordnance Works, first to synthesize toluene from petroleum, has supplied the toluene for at least one out of every two bombs used by the United Nations since Pearl Harbor.
 - FIRST in the production of crude oil. Humble Oil & Refining Company is the nation's largest producer of crude oil, and is currently supplying about one-fourth of the increased production required for war as measured by the gain since 1941.
 - FIRST in the transportation of petroleum. The Humble pipe lines transport more oil than any other system, handle one barrel in every seven, of the domestic supply.

These accomplishments climax a quarter century of development, planning and team work of a great organization. The men and women who made them possible are behind the billion gallons of 100-octane aviation gasoline. They are behind whatever America needs of them for victory.

Robot Cameraman Permits This Most Recent G. E. Aerial Photography at Night

Schenectady, Dec. 23.—An electronic control that automatically synchronizes a new type shutter for aircraft cameras with the bursting of a flash bomb, thus enabling military observers to photograph from high altitudes and at night the destruction caused by their explosives, has been developed through the collaboration of General Electric and The Folmer Graflex Corporation.

Use of this unique control permits the camera to take advantage of the peak illumination of the bomb by beginning an exposure in approximately 1/100 of a second after the flash bursts. After the desired exposure time has elapsed, the control closes the shutter of its own accord.

The new G. E. camera automatically records the time and date of the flash, and the film is ready for another picture to be taken automatically as soon as the next bomb explodes.

Brains of this robot control is a sensitive photo-electric cell that acts on the light impulse coming from the bomb. When the flash explodes the photo-electric cell picks up a light impulse, amplifies it and transforms it into a current to which the shutter responds in less than 1/1000 of a second. By using its ingenious combination, an aerial camera, otherwise of use for daylight photography only, can be converted into a camera capable of taking night photographs of the ground in great enough detail to permit the closest military study.

Small enough to fit into a hat bag and weighing only nine pounds, this robot device was designed especially for use on reconnaissance planes and bombers. Both photo-electric cell and control and shutter are shock-proof in construction. When in use, the control operates on three-billions of a watt—about the equivalent of the energy spent when a human hair falls 1/10 of an inch.

The Nevils Methodist church will be the scene of a charge-wide crusade for Christ rally on next Sunday, Dec. 31st, for the Bulloch County circuit. The morning service will begin at 12. Zack S. Henderson, dean of Georgia Teachers' College, is the principal speaker. Mr. Henderson is an inspiring speaker, and the public is cordially invited to hear his message during the morning worship hour.

Lunch will be spread at the church. Those attending are requested to bring a basket of food if it is convenient to be shared with the group. The lunch hour will begin at 1 o'clock. The afternoon program, beginning at 2, is planned so as to give general and specific information concerning every phase of the work and service of the great crusade for Christ. Those participating in this program will be Miss Virginia Miller, C. O. Bohler, Mrs. Frankie Watson, Dr. Clifford Miller and Raymond G. Hodges. These people will discuss separately the five aspects of the crusade, which are: world relief and reconstruction, evangelism, stewardship, and increasing church school enrollment and attendance.

At the close of the afternoon service one steward representing each church of the circuit will bring to the altar, and dedicate to Christ, the amount requested of his church to be given to the crusade for Christ.

The stewards of the Bulloch circuit are planning to place on the altar next Sunday afternoon the full quota for the circuit, $804. The membership is co-operating well, so the report comes, that this great service for Christ may be victoriously done.

Between Us

When Santa made his rounds and safely put his reindeers away for another year, he could easily have said, "Well done," because from all reports he left gifts from all over the world at the fireplaces in Statesboro. Little Detsy and Anna Bird Daniel found two perfectly beautiful hand-carved cradles that came all the way from Belgium from her daddy, Dr. Bird Daniel. The cradles were a complete surprise although they had been in the States sometime. Ann Preston found a real French doll that was all dressed in gay French clothes that her daddy, Prince, had sent in time. A little girl awoke to find just the doll she had picked out of the catalogue but she will probably never know just how much effort it took to get that particular doll. Several months ago little Linda Pound found the doll she wanted with long hair and beautiful clothes. But when the doll was ordered, they had sold out. Not to be outdone, Willie Mathews (her grandmother) decided to make the doll look just like the one she wanted. She found one in the stores with no hair. She took an old hair switch which had been made from her own hair many years ago and borrowed her cook's curling iron to put the finishing touches to the hair. Copying the dress exactly, when the doll was already to make her appearance it was exactly like the catalogue doll. So Santa scored another hit Christmas morning. Mary Jon Johnston gave her order weeks ago and by her chimney, along with many other gifts, was a pale green satin nightgown, a bed-jacket to match and a lovely satin quilted housecoat. Dot (her mother) says they are beginning to wonder if she has a green complex.

The Joe Tillman house was never prettier than this year with a lighted V over the door, a bright colored spray on the white door and a Christmas tree seen from the road with many colored lights. Flowers made their appearance all over town from the boys overseas who had ordered them many months ago so they would be received on that special day. The newspaper the Attaways sent out as Christmas greetings was about the most unusual greeting found in the mails. It was a complete paper even to the advertisements and nothing in the paper was correct. The news in it was copied from papers all over the country from the past twenty-five years. If you didn't receive one you really missed some very entertaining reading. Christmas brought many of our people back home, some who had not been here in sometime. Belton Braswell, who flew back to the States from the South Pacific, was here from Thomasville hospital, and his mother had quite a crowd of young people to drop in Monday night. Ouida Brannen Peacock and Nell Brannen Godbee were here for a short visit and it was hard for them to do some last-minute shopping as they were stopped by friends all along the way. The annual J.T.J. all-night party went off in high style Friday night, and early Saturday morning found many of the guests back at work, even though they had scarcely any sleep. When Frank Blackburn, who is somewhere in Belgium, stopped at a Red Cross motor truck for hot coffee, he noticed that one of the Red Cross workers looked familiar; so on making inquiry he learned that he was being served by Ann Edge, a former Statesboro girl. He wrote his mother, Mrs. Roy Blackburn, that he enjoyed his coffee doubly knowing that it was being served him by a girl from his home town. Will see you

AROUND TOWN.
